She writes great articles for the local newspaper about the Bubonic Plague and hypnotizing chickens. They send them back, but she won't give up. Find out what happens when Penny Pollard combines her career as a cub reporter with some wild and crazy schemes to avoid having to wear a hideous pink dress (plus pink lace mittens) at a gruesome wedding. This is the third book about Penny Pollard, who has been described as "a female version of Adrian Mole". The first two, Penny Pollard's Diary and Penny Pollard's Letters, have delighted would-be rebellious heroines everywhere. As before, the book is illustrated with Penny's own inimitable collection of drawings and photographs. Praise for Penny Pollard's Diary: "What a splendid girl is Penny Pollard! She's Australian, 10 years old and mad about horses... truly original and entertaining." -- The Philadelphian Inquirer
